

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

NAPA, CALIF. - August 8, 2006 - Andrew Lane, a family-run Napa winery (www.andrewlanewines.com) has been invited to pour its award-winning wines at the Napa Town and Country Fair Gala tonight at 5:30.

David Dickson, founder of Andrew Lane wines, is President of the 2006 Napa County Fair and was appointed to the board of directors by then California State Governor Gray Davis four years ago. His son, Andrew Dickson, Andrew Lane winemaker and CEO, will be on hand to pour the winery's eclectic varietals for gala attendees.

David Dickson commented, "The Napa Town and Country Fair is very special to our community, family and friends and we hope to maintain this vibrant atmosphere for years to come."

Andrew Dickson added, "Andrew Lane is proud to support one of the last remaining open spaces in the City of Napa – a celebration for the people of Napa County. And, this premier event after all, is where our winery made its mark, when my father received 'Best of Show' award for his Sauvignon Blanc in 1983."

Wine tasting and food sampling from some of the Valley's best wineries and restaurants will be the feature for the evening. Local attendees will taste wines, sampling foods and visiting with the vintners, caterers, wine makers, restaurant owners, and chefs "under the stars."

The event is sponsored by the non-profit Friends of the Fair Foundation. At a cost of just $25, which includes wine and food tasting and a souvenir glass, tickets can be purchased in person at the Expo office or via phone - (707) 253-4900 ext. 102.
